

Table of Contents

Introduction

- Brandes as a Vital Cosmopolitan Archive | 9
- The Goals of the Book | 13
- Brandes' Jewish Cosmopolitanism | 20
- The Jewish Question(s) | 25
- Methodological Reflections:
Brandes' Struggles in the Civil Sphere | 30

Chapter 1

Brandes' Early Writings

and the Transnational Vision | 39

- Introduction | 39
- Brandes' Seemingly Predestined Academic Path | 45
- Brandes' Conception of the Modern Jew in his Early Writings | 46
- The Figure of the Modern Jew | 51
- Flexibility | 52
- Universal Justice as a Primary Virtue | 54
- The Critical View | 56
- The Transnational Vision | 58
- The Exile | 61
- Brandes' Figure of the Emigrant | 63
- The Figure of the Critic | 65
- Conclusion | 67

Chapter 2

The Stranger as Ideal in the Fin-De-Siècle Period | 73

Introduction | 73

A Critical Reading of Simmel's "Exkurs über den Fremden" | 76

Simmel's Universal Stranger Figure | 79

The Historical Context of Simmel's Essay | 82

The Jewish Stranger and Nineteenth-Century

Organicist Metaphors | 85

Georg Brandes' Modern Jew as an Ideal Stranger | 86

Henrik Pontoppidan and Georg Brandes | 89

The "Plan" of Lykke-Per | 90

Per and Jakobe | 92

The Metaphor of Jewish Rootlessness | 94

The Ambivalence of Lykke-Per | 95

Moritz Lazarus: A German Jew from Posen | 97

The Berliner Antisemitismstreit and

Moritz Lazarus' Was heisst national? | 100

Moritz Lazarus' Reaction to Treitschke's Attack | 101

Georg Simmel's Idea of a "Third Nation" | 105

Conclusion | 108

An Introduction to the Representation of

Jewishness in Brandes' Later Writings | 110

Chapter 3

Brandes' Distancing Strategies of De-Judaizing and De-Cosmopolitanization in his Later Writings | 113

Introduction | 113

Brandes' Changed View on Race | 116

Modern Antisemitism | 118

Brandes' Erasing of Jewish and Cosmopolitan Elements
from Samlede Skrifter and Levned | 123

Conclusion | 130

Chapter 4

Brandes' Re-Interpretations

of the Athens vs. Jerusalem Dichotomy | 133

Introduction | 133

The Athens vs. Jerusalem Dichotomy | 136

The German Socrates | 138

Hegel and Heine's Nazarenism | 139

Friedrich Nietzsche | 140

Vilhelm Andersen and Modern Antisemitism | 142

"The Entire Country was Steeped in Judaism" | 146

Nazarenism vs. Hellenism | 150

And Justice For All | 153

Conclusion | 157

Chapter 5

Brandes' Spinozist Cosmopolitanism

in his Later Writings | 159

Introduction | 159

The Philosophical and Literary Background
of Brandes' Spinozist Cosmopolitanism | 163

Kant's Cosmopolitanism | 163

Moderate and Radical Enlightenment | 166

The Ex-Jew versus the Eternal Jew Reception of Spinoza | 169

Berthold Auerbach's Spinoza | 173

The Story of Auerbach's Spinoza | 174

Spinoza's Secularly Orientated Interpretations of the Jewish Tradition | 175

Brandes' Perception of a Jewish Tradition of Secular Thought and Practice | 179

Universal Justice | 180

Brandes' Reading of Kohélet | 184

Brandes' Spinozist Cosmopolitanism | 187

Conclusion | 189

Discussion

Brandes' Representation of Jewishness

as a Vital Archive for Today's Cosmopolitanisms | 193

Recapitulation of the Five Chapters | 193

The Revitalized Idealization of Jewish Strangeness | 195

European Jewish Fin-De-Siècle Cosmopolitanism

as a Model—for What? | 196

The Greek/Roman-Kantian Cosmopolitan Tradition | 198

The Jewish-related Ideal Stranger as a Model | 199

Different Paths to the Same Civil Sphere | 209

Conclusion | 214

Appendix | 218

Quotations from Brandes in their Original Danish Form | 218

Chapter 1 | 218

Chapter 4 | 223

Chapter 5 | 227

German Quotations in Original Language (translated by SBH) | 229

Bibliography | 231

Notes | 245

Index of Names | 281